AoP Training

Process standardization is an integral part of Art of the Possible (AoP) and a key component in unifying the Air Force Sustainment Center (AFSC) in pursuit of excellence. As part of this effort, AFSC/DP developed comprehensive training to cultivate understanding at all levels. This provides a framework for the organization's management approach to corporate leadership, common processes, and collaborative execution. These tools and resources are delivered to the workforce in a tiered model delineated by personnel experience and duty position: basic level for new employees, intermediate level for non-supervisory, advanced level for supervisory, and expert level for senior leaders as depicted in the delivery model below:

Basic level training consists of elemental AoP familiarization; intermediate level introduces the science behind the philosophy; advanced level provides in-depth methodology exploration coupled with practical application exercises and practical wall walk examples; expert level incorporates robust analysis of foundational concepts and leadership's role in enterprise implementation.

Workforce education reinforces a culture of ownership and problem-solving, fosters an understanding of AoP core tenets and provides a standardized roadmap clearly demonstrating how organizations achieve Art of the Possible results. The standardized training which has been developed and provided for Center wide use will support AFSC in the goal to embrace AoP across all organizations.

All training has been thoroughly reviewed and approved by the AFSC appointed Subject Matter Experts. For further information, please contact the AFSC AoP Workflow at AFSC.DP.AoPWorkflow@us.af.mil.
